

Abstract

The invention relates to an implant with antibiotic long-term action, in particular a vascular prosthesis, with a basic structure which defines the form of the implant and which is made of substantially non-absorbable or only slowly absorbable polymer material and of a coating of an absorbable material, with a layer of metallic silver situated on the polymer material and underneath the coating.